

For Daniella

You don't know your gender identity, standing in society, etc (veil of ignorance). Would the conversation of how to structure political societies be easier, more effective? Different material positions influence you towards self interest. Rich people think that increasing tax rates by income is unjust - why should I pay for your failings? We want to try to enforce partial blindness to make our assessments of rules more fair.

On the objection "There must be bias in these rules"?

- There might be people willing to take risks
- Veil of ignorance does not presuppose the society that we currently have - its making an entirely new system from scratch
- Veil of ignorance as an anti-utility theory
 - No one would want to agree to be in a disadvantaged minority

Liberty principle - everyone have as much freedom as possible without reducing the liberty of everyone else.

P1. Slavery and political coercion are similar because they both rely on nonconsensual coercion.

P2. Political coercion produces benefits

P3. Slavery produces some benefits

P4. The benefits of political coercion outweigh the costs and they are not unreasonable.

P5. The benefits of slavery don't outweigh the costs, which are unreasonable

C. Therefore political coercion and slavery are distinct.

Claim: Companies as states w/ personal laws/enforcement reduces to total anarchism

P1: Private companies ^{only} serve those who freely sign up

P2: I can make a new private company for my own goals

P3: P1 & P2 $\Rightarrow$ People in conflict would be ^{protected by} companies that represent their own personal goals $\Rightarrow$ Claim

Additional:

P4) Lack of enforcement between different company-states

P5) different "ideas" of justice apply (non uniform)

P6) ppl optimize profit (advertisements)

C: Private agencies would ultimately not eliminate the same conflict that would be present in a state of nature. [social welfare (peace & stability) a lawyer wants to mediate conflicts, perverse incentive]
